

Wow, what a harvest season!

It seems we had it all thrown at us this fall. Now is a good time to call Dave Bean and Darrel Dutro to sign up that combine or tractor up for inspections while the problems are still fresh in your mind. Fairbanks International may not be able to do much about the weather, but they do offer great service and parts availability; also a lot of experienced techs to solve those problems. It doesn't seem possible that spring tillage season is right around the corner with some farmers still harvesting.

It's time to start thinking about getting your flail shredders ready to chop stalks. Be sure to check knives, D-rings and bearings. For your safety, when you have that shredder up, block it up so that the possibility of it settling down is completely eliminated while you are under the machine inspecting or making repairs. One more item to look at would be your cabs and wiring. It would be a good idea to put some mouse treatment in your cabs to prevent mouse damage to your wiring, seat cushions, insulation and your expensive monitors.
